

The Day I Found a Fossil

What a day! I got up as normal at 8 o'clock and set out for the dig site. As I was leaving my tent, my friend Becky shouted, 'Don't forget your trowel.' How lucky that was! I had left it on top of my camp bed.

When I reached the site, lots of people were already at work. I found Professor Martin and asked, 'Where should I work?' He said, 'Would you like to try the old valley?' I was really pleased as I know people have found fossils there already.

I set to work with my hammer and trowel. Guess what? I found a wonderful fossil within 5 minutes of starting to dig. I think it is the neck bone of a Triceratops. 'Look here!' I called out. People rushed over. 'Be careful. Keep off this bit of ground.' I said happily.
